

Announcing an Exciting Graduate Assistantship Opportunity!

The Georgia State University School of Music in partnership with the GSU library and Johnny Mercer Foundation is pleased to offer three graduate assistantships for students enrolling in the Master of Music degree in Music Education.

These graduate assistantships offer the following to recipients:

(Recipients need to be enrolled as full-time students):

- 1 Tuition waiver for four semesters
- 2 $2000 stipend per semester for a total of $8000.
- 3 Recipients will receive personalized professional development to design and deliver an extended curriculum unit focusing on American popular music 1900-1950. The focus of the unit is driven by the recipient's interest and supported by GSU music education faculty and library resources. It can cover any aspect of this time period.

Recipients currently teaching in a school setting will design their curriculum unit for their school and students. Recipients not currently teaching in a school setting will design their curriculum unit for GSU partnership schools.

The Master of Music Education degree typically is completed in two years by full-time students, with much of the coursework available in the evening or online.

To Apply:

Please follow the instructions on the GSU School of Music website for application to the Master of Music degree in Music Education: music.gsu.edu/graduate/master-music/music-education/

Application for this assistantship requires one additional step:

In addition, please email directly to Kevin Fleming (kfleming@gsu.edu) a 1-2 page statement of the area of focus you would like to develop into a curriculum unit focusing on American popular music 1900-1950.

For additional information, please contact Mr. Fleming at kfleming@gsu.edu.
